

County lifts burning ban

BY DENA BISNETTE
The ban on burning in the county has been lifted. Hancock County Forester Mark Jamieson and Fire Marshal Jay Marsh decided to lift the ban this week after 2.2 inches of rain fell in about 48 hours, Marsh said.

The ban ended Thursday on an order by Marsh, who with Jamieson had presented a request for the moratorium to the board of supervisors on March 14. Marsh, as county fire services coordinator, has the authority to order or end a ban without formal approval from the board of supervisors. "We finally got enough rain that we feel safe," he said.

The ban was approved due to the dry conditions prior to the rains and the fact that wildfires in Hancock County had damaged or destroyed 746 acres since March 1, according to Jamieson's statistics.

Marsh said that anyone who now wishes to burn trash, debris or land needs to contact their local fire department, as burning permits are required in many areas. In rural communities, they should contact Jamieson and his staff at the fire tower, 255-7152.

Community interest roused as recycling contest ends

BY D.C. HARVILL
An astonishing amount of glass, paper and cans collected by students of three schools in Bay St. Louis and Waveland attests to the volume of material-Americans waste and to the need for a local recycling program.

In slightly less than a month, ending Wednesday, students at St. Clare Elementary, Christ Episcopal Elementary and Our Lady Academy collected 14,616 pounds of recyclable material that otherwise would have been hauled to a dump or wound up on the roadside as litter.

The students collected the material as part of a contest organized by the eighth grade earth science class taught by Amy Poole at OLA.

St. Clare won the contest, having collected 8,718 pounds. OLA was second with 4,613 pounds. Christ Episcopal gathered 1,285 pounds.

The amount collected by each school was divided by the school's number of students to determine the order of finish.

"In amount per student the three schools were very close; the average was about 23 pounds," Poole said.

When the company that was supposed to transport the material to a recycling plant backed out, Poole feared the contest would have to be called off.

"We carried the first load to Slidell in a school bus and in cars," she said.

The project was saved when John Fayard Fast Freight in Gulfport volunteered to haul the material in one of their trucks.

The OLA class that organized the contest intends to enter the project in a state-wide energy awareness competition.

At the beginning of the project, the students said they hoped recycling would continue on a community-wide level when the contest was over.

The class will continue to collect aluminum cans to raise money for the school's science lab, Poole said.

Encouraged by the interest exhibited by the community's involvement in the contest, several groups have expressed interest in recycling campaigns.

According to Poole, a woman's club has shown interest in a recycling program to help raise funds for charitable causes.

The Coast chapter of Mississippi 20/20 Network, now in its organizational stage, is considering a major recycling program as one of their projects.

PRCC to operate Hancock center for one more year

BY DENA BISNETTE

The Pearl River Community College Board has decided that the college will continue to operate its vocational technical center in Hancock County for the 1989-90 school year.

The center recently became controversial when PRCC officials were informed by the state junior college board that it is illegal for junior colleges to fund high school-level programs.

The initial reaction of college officials was to ask the Hancock County School District, which is constructing a new secondary school next to the vocational-technical center, to take over the funding, which Superintendent of Education Terrell Randolph said would be a financial hardship on his district.

On Thursday, the PRCC board met again to decide the fate of the vocational center.

According to Bay St. Louis Councilman Jim Thriffley, who represents Hancock County on the board, the college will continue to fund and operate the center during the 1989-90 school year.

Thriffley said the motion was made by Superintendent Emil Pav of Lamar County, where PRCC also operates a center. The vote was 11 to three in favor of continuing to operate the centers for Hancock and Lamar and Forrest counties.

While an official plan has not been completed for a phased-in changeover that will turn the centers over to local school districts by the 1992-93 school year, a proposal was provided at Thursday's meeting.

According to Thriffley, the present form of the proposal calls for the college to provide $73,000 to $75,000 for 1990-91; $3,700 for 1992-93; and no operating funds for 1992-93.

Each year, the local school districts, under the proposal, would take over the share of the cost of operations not covered by the college.

Thriffley said the proposal will be worked on this summer and should be completed in time for a January 1990 vote by the board.

He said he feels the other board members will vote for the phase-in program, which he has been advocating since the controversy began about three weeks ago.

"I told Dr. Alexander that it would have been too abrupt," he explained.

"The phase-in is really a better deal than my original proposal because we (Hancock Countians) don't have to pay anything the first year."

In addition, Thriffley added that the Hancock and Bay St. Louis-Waveland school districts will continue getting about $60,000 in average daily attendance funds for students

Passage of bill clears way for Vietnam vet memorial

BY D.C. HARVILL

A bill passed by Mississippi's legislature Wednesday clears the way for construction of a memorial honoring those men and women from the state who fought and died in the Vietnam War.

Bay St. Louis attorney Henry Cook, chairman of the Mississippi Vietnam Memorial Committee, said Friday, he had been informed of the bill's passage by State Senator Gene Taylor and State Representative J.P. Compretta, both of Bay St. Louis.

The bill stipulates that the MVMC is the only organization authorized to solicit funds for the memorial which is to be built at Point Cadet in Biloxi.

The idea of constructing a Mississippi Vietnam Veterans Memorial originated with a group of Vietnamese Americans who wanted to show their appreciation to Mississippians who fought to keep Vietnam a free country, according to a pamphlet provided by the committee.

When the "Moving Wall" (the half-sized replica of the national Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington, D.C.) was visited by 30,000 people while on display at Point Cadet for seven days in June 1988, it became apparent there was a need for a permanent memorial to honor Mississippi's Vietnam veterans, Cook said.

In November 1988 the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Committee was formed and, shortly thereafter, the City of Biloxi decided to the committee three and one-half acres at Point Cadet for construction of the memorial.

Ten proposals, nine by Mississippi State School of Architecture students and one from the Vietnamese community, were submitted for the memorial's design.

The memorial's final design has been selected by the committee using elements from several of the proposals.

A state-wide competition will be held to determine an architect for the final design, Cook said.

When completed the memorial will connect land, air and sea so that it will represent all branches of the armed forces.

Segments of the memorial will be dedicated to women and to Vietnamese who took part in

Choose the right tree when planting under power lines

Planting a yard tree is one of the nicest things in life we can do for generations that follow us. Unfortunately, like anything else, planting a tree can go wrong if we don't put some thought into it.

One thing that can go wrong is placing a tree that will ultimately grow into a large tree under or near a power line.

Trees and power lines just don't mix, and the combination becomes expensive to the consumer when pruning and line-clearing costs are passed on to him by the utility company.

For example, the cost to maintain tree clearances around power lines in a fairly large metropolitan area can run into several million dollars a year.

What can be done to avoid such expenses? First, large trees such as oaks, pines, gums, poplars and many others, should not be planted closer than 30 feet to utility lines. Allowing a 30-foot clearance means, of course, that many people cannot plant large trees in their yards at all.

The answer to that problem is to plant trees that will be relatively small at maturity—such as crape myrtles, wax myrtles, crab apples, dogwoods, red-buds, yaupon holly, purple plums and cherry laurels.

These species will form their natural crowns below most power lines. But even if pruning is needed, it is feasible to prune smaller species without spoiling the shape of the tree, and the pruning can be accomplished economically as well.

Maintaining large trees already existing under power lines is not only expensive, but the repeated heavy pruning you'll have to do will likely cause a decline in the health of the tree and thus make it more susceptible to breakage during a storm.

who are actually attending the vocational-technical center.

He stated both districts can use the funds, which will eventually have to go to the center as the ownership is transferred from the college, for enrichment of other programs during the 1989-90 school year.

The districts have been getting the funds for the 16 years the college has operated the vocational center, which is the only one in the PRCC district where we have time to plan."

One helpful factor that the local school districts can look forward to during the changeover is more state funding for the center than the college would have received. The state's allocation of funds for the support and clerical personnel and benefits for vocational-technical teachers are also higher per teacher unit than those for academic teachers, Thrifflay added.

local students can attend without having to pay tuition.

"They (the PRCC board) were bending over backward to help us, because they realized we were kind of in a bind because of the lateness," Thrifflay added, referring to the fact that the board had originally asked the Hancock school district to take over when its budget was nearly completed.

"I think everybody's concerns can be put aside," he said. "Now the struggle.

"Everyone agrees that it will be the most talked about memorial in the country and some say it may be the most controversial," Cook said.

It may be controversial, he said, because in addition to the names and ages of Mississippians slain in Vietnam, their faces will be laser etched in stone at the bottom of a stream that will flow from a fountain at the memorial's center.

Official records in Washington list 637 Mississippians who died in Vietnam but, since the records do not account for Mississippians who enlisted elsewhere, more will be included in the memorial, Cook said.

"If there is any doubt to whether they were from Mississippi we will give them the benefit of that doubt," Cook explained.

The memorial will also honor the 18 from Mississippi who are still missing in Vietnam.

With passage of the bill, fundraising for the project has officially begun. The seventh grade class at Michelle Middle School in Biloxi contributed $200 Thursday to become the first official donor.

Completed cost of the memorial is estimated to be between $1 million and $1.5 million.

The committee plans to have the memorial completed, dedicated and paid for by November 11, 1991, Cook said.

Donations for the memorial can be sent to Mississippi Vietnam Veterans Memorial, Inc., P.O. Box 721, Biloxi, MS 39533. For additional information call 374-VETS or 435-5419.

TRUCK FIRE

Hancock County Fire Marshal Jay Marsh is investigating a fire that destroyed a pick-up truck when the owner left the vehicle after an accident.

Marsh said the 1985 Toyota pick-up truck, which belonged to Greg Lee of the Bienville Community.

The fire marshal said Lee told him he had hit the Catahoula Bridge at about 9 p.m. Wednesday during a heavy rain and left the vehicle there, intending to return for it later.

A witness told Marsh he passed the truck a short time after Lee left it and the vehicle had two flat tires, apparently caused by the impact against the bridge.

The Leetown Volunteer Fire Department responded to a call at about 10:30 p.m. and found that the truck had burned.

SENTENCES

Two Bay St. Louis residents have been given suspended six-month sentences for simple assault in a case involving alleged abuse of two small children.

Patrick Wayne Green, 32, and Della Rae Sylvester, 29, both of 123 Melody Lane, entered pleas of no contest to the misdemeanor assault charges in Hancock County Circuit Court this week.

Green and Sylvester were convicted in Bay St. Louis City Court on misdemeanor abuse charges of Sylvester's older son, who at the time of the 1987 incident was five years old.

Sylvester's conviction was appealed to Circuit Court, affirmed, and is now on appeal to the Mississippi Supreme Court. Green also appealed to Circuit Court, which resulted in a hung jury.

The two were later indicted by a Hancock County Grand Jury regarding the alleged abuse of Sylvester's younger son, then 14 months old. They were charged with felony child abuse.

The two had been accused by welfare department officials of harming the children by striking them.

The felony charge against Green was dropped at the request of the district attorney's office and the felony charge against Sylvester was reduced to a misdemeanor.

Green and Sylvester have been placed on non-reporting probation during the six-month suspended sentence.

Because it takes so long to get a case through the criminal court system, people feel there is no relationship anymore between crime and punishment. It is going to take long hours and hard work to return to the days of swift and appropriate punishment.

EDITORIAL

Trees are vital for our survival

An interesting article in the March issue of Mississippi Municipalities about trees was brought to our attention by Bay Mayor Victor Franckiewicz Jr.

The article tells how many people, because of last summer's boiling temperatures, feel the global warming trend known as the 'greenhouse effect' has already set in.

A strong environmental group known as the 'Tree People', backed by the American Forestry Association, has been organized in California.

The group urges the planting of trees to help counter the 'greenhouse effect', because they absorb carbon dioxide.

Experts say the buildup of carbon dioxide traps the sun's rays before they bounce back into space and could warm the Earth enough by the 21st century to raise sea levels, inundating wetlands and low-lying human settlements.

Also, aquifers, crucial sources of drinking water, would be imperiled by intruding salt water.

New Orleans and Miami would be among the first, and most seriously, endangered.

The 'Tree People' urge the planting of trees around homes, streets, highways, parks, playgrounds and where ever soil is available.

The American Forestry Association, which for years has been urging people to save and plant trees, is urging the planting of 100 million trees by 1992.

The 'Tree People' aim to set a national model with 5 million new trees in Los Angeles alone.

Our area is blessed with many trees, yet the count is on the decline because of storms, fires, construction and acts of uncaring humans.

Our Forestry department, city leaders, chamber, businesses, garden clubs and other organizations urge the planting of trees, yet this may not be enough.

Maybe we need to form a 'Tree People' in Hancock County.

This week's Pilgrimage will include tours at John C. Stennis Space Center, Hancock County Welcome Center, Diamondhead, and Pass Christian.

The John C. Stennis Space Center and the Hancock County Welcome Center will begin the annual event on Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

There will be guided bus tours every 45 minutes to the Space Shuttle Complex and to the site of historic Gainesville, once the county seat of Hancock County, on the banks of East Pearl River.

There also will be many exhibits, live demonstrations, movies and a panoramic view from the 90-foot Space Tower.

Ladies from the Bay-Waveland and Diamondhead Garden Clubs will serve as additional hostesses at the Hancock County Welcome Center on I-10 on Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The Welcome Center, claimed by many to be one of the most beautiful in this country, has a very lovely setting among the trees away from the hustle of the Interstate.

At Diamondhead on Wednesday, several homes will be open for the Pilgrimage.

On Friday I noticed many trees and shrubs in full bloom on a drive through Diamondhead.

For some time now, the residents of Diamondhead have been making preparations for Wednesday's Pilgrimage.

Historic Pass Christian will play host to the Pilgrimage on Thursday.

There will be many places of interest on the Pilgrimage tour, some dating to before the Civil War.

We hope many of you will take advantage of the Pilgrimage and take the time to see the many points of interest right here in our own 'backyard'.

The Bay-Waveland area's Pilgrimage day will be on April 6.

See you at the Pilgrimage.

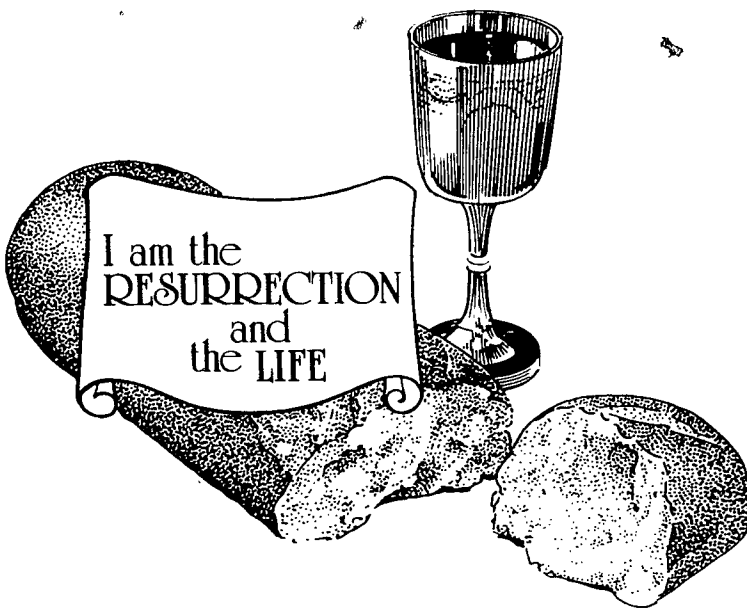

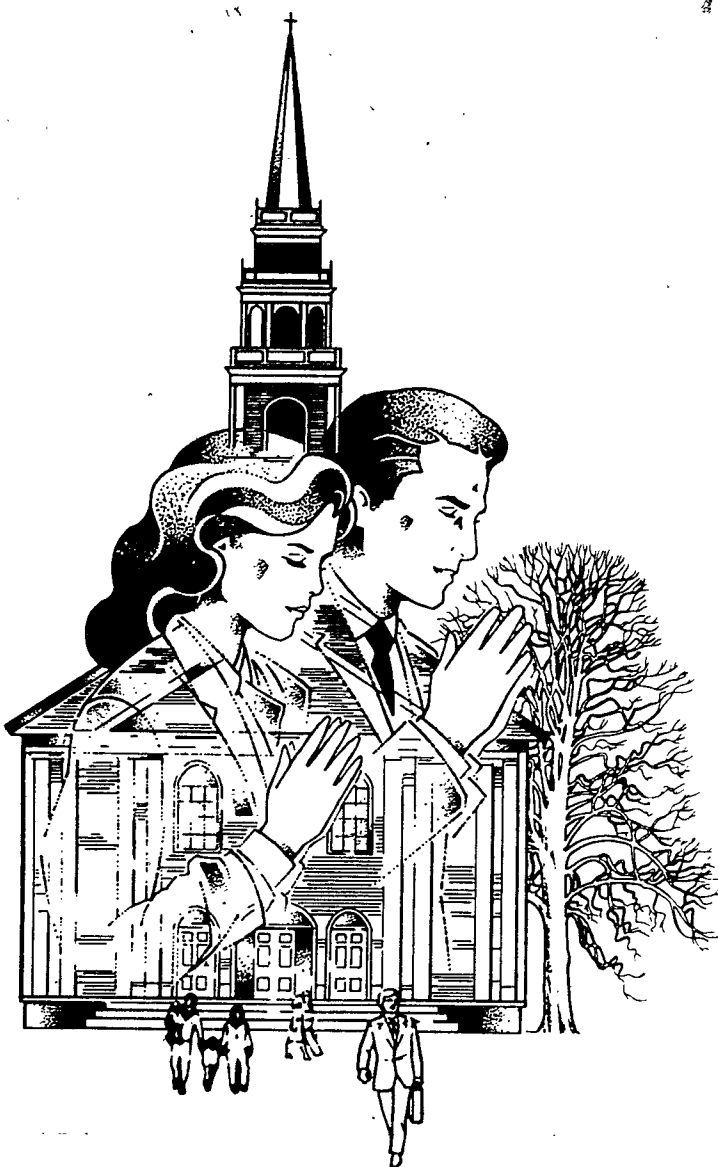

We still see many beautiful clusters of azalea bushes in full bloom.

The front yard of Rosemary Blaize on Easterbrook Street is one of many with beautiful azaleas in our area.

Rosemary, a long-time former Echo employee really has her grounds nice since her retirement.

Keep those azaleas blooming Rosemary.

The membership meeting will feature two morning sessions, which will examine the state of Mississippi's economy and the 1989 legislative session.

Kiplinger will be joined by two business leaders who will discuss Mississippi's economic potential.

The two business leaders are Lewis Malory of Starkville, president of the National Bank of Commerce and a former chairman of the Mississippi Economic Council; and James Campbell of Jackson, president of MISSCO and president of the Mississippi Business Roundtable.

The mid-morning session will turn a spotlight on the state Capitol to review the results of the 1989 Legislature.

The group will discuss highlights of the 1989 session during the 9:30 a.m. session which will be held April 13 at the Holiday Inn Downtown, along with the rest of the annual meeting events. The late morning session has been scheduled for 10:45 a.m.

State's substance abuse policies outlined

It is popular today to talk about drug and alcohol abuse. Everybody is talking about it. You've seen and read horror stories about persons whose lives have been destroyed by drug and alcohol abuse.

I am not going to bore you with the same old talk. The time for talking is over. It is time to do something about it.

There are four major developments that have put drug and alcohol abuse on the front burner of state government. You need to know about these efforts because the time will come soon when we need your help to make it work.

Recently, I established a Substance Abuse Policy Council, which will be made up of Mississippians from all walks of life. Chaired by Attorney General Mike Moore, this group will report back to me on Nov. 1 with a proposed statewide plan for fighting drug and alcohol abuse.

We have never had such a plan before. Our goal is to create a plan that involves every segment of society in Mississippi including government, business and schools.

The drug and alcohol problem in Mississippi is enough to overwhelm any one of these groups, but together we have a fighting chance.

Law enforcement is not enough. In most cases, the problem already is out of hand by the time law enforcement becomes involved.

We need a larger solution that gets at the root causes of the drug and alcohol problem. I believe the statewide plan will help us find that solution.

A second development—which helped bring about the Substance Abuse Policy Council—was Attorney General Moore's "Bridge the Gap" Program last year. He traveled throughout Mississippi hearing what people had to say, and one thing they recommended was establishment of a statewide council to develop a statewide plan.

Third, the state Department of Public Safety and the Bureau of Narcotics have gone to some extraordinary lengths to crack down on drug and alcohol abuse in the last year.

Through Operation Saturation, state troopers arrested a record number of drunk and drugged drivers. As a result, Mississippi was the only state in the United States designated entirely as a "strict enforcement area" by the American Automobile Association.

Fourth, I want to recognize the leadership of the Mississippi Legislature. Lt. Gov. Brad Dye and House Speaker Tim Ford recently announced that they will appoint a special joint committee to look at the drug and alcohol problem as well.

As you can see, there is a lot more than talk going on in Mississippi when it comes to drug and alcohol abuse. We are trying to do something about it.

Finally, I want to commend groups like DREAM, MADD and DARE. These groups have done much to force action by public officials.

In a matter of days, I will announce appointments to the Substance Abuse Policy Council. These members—and the group as a whole—will need to hear from you about what needs to be done. Please join us in this effort.

House Resolution eulogizes Justice J. Ruble Griffin

The Mississippi House of Representatives has adopted a resolution commending the life of State Supreme Court Justice J. Ruble Griffin of Bay St. Louis and expressing sorrow over his death.

The resolution, introduced by Representative J. P. Compretta of Bay St. Louis, noted that Justice Griffin served as a Circuit Court judge in the Second District prior to joining the Supreme Court in July 1986.

He also formerly served as a state assistant attorney general, as city attorney for Bay St. Louis, and as attorney for the Hancock County Board of Supervisors and the Hancock County School Board.

Justice Griffin, who died on Dec. 29, 1988, was a native of Chickasaw County and received his law degree from the University of Mississippi. He served as paratrooper in World War II, stationed in Europe.

"Justice Griffin's service to his community, state and our judicial system will long be remembered and his example will serve as a guide for all members of the bench and bar," the resolution said.

The resolution extended sympathy to Justice Griffin's family and friends.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Welfare grateful for help in distributing commodities

To the Editor:

I take this opportunity to thank Sheriff Ronnie Peterson, his staff and trustees for the help they have given us.

Yesterday we distributed commodities again. There is a lot of work involved in this project.

First we had to unload four items from the truck and stack it for counting—total gross weight, 15,597 pounds.

Next we had to bag the items, and then distribute them to more than 1,300 recipients.

Finally, the building and parking lot had to be cleaned. The trustees and Mr. Watts worked very hard and did a good job. Without their help it would be almost impossible for us to distribute commodities.

The trustees also clean our building, cut the grass, and do other odd jobs for us that we need help with, and we appreciate their help very much.

Sincerely,

Wallace Bradley,
Director
Hancock County Welfare Department

Side Street Crossings

By Dena Bisnette

Last time I went into a department store, I was looking for a birthday present for a friend so I ventured into unfamiliar territory—kitchenwares.

I eventually ended up buying a necklace for her because I saw something later on that I felt suited her personality, even though she does like to cook. Besides, I couldn't decide between the 10-gallon gumbo pot and the 25-gallon one.

I never shop for kitchen items anymore. When I married Joe last year, I found out that the best way to get kitchen gadgets is to get married. People will start giving them to you.

Kind friends will fix you up with things like food processors, electric woks, flatware and serving dishes as wedding presents. I was delighted! Joe and I ended up with a well-equipped kitchen all the way down to a fancy tablecloth and fancy napkins we use for fancy company.

Later gift-giving occasions result in more kitchen things. In-laws who hardly know you, bless their kind hearts, will send you the decorative pieces like cordial glasses, salt-and-pepper shakers and gorgeous little jars. That's nice of them.

It becomes the same as socks and underwear, though. Remember being a kid and getting enough socks and underwear for an army on every birthday, Christmas and whatever?

Well, grow up, marry and you'll have to find a polite way to ask that nobody give you any more kitchen items. Instead, you request a cookbook or two telling you how to use them or maybe some more storage space.

The one I don't want to stop from coming up with the kitchen gadgets is the guy who invents them. He's missed a few things, not only in the kitchen but elsewhere in the household too.

When is he going to invent a paper towel dispenser that gives you one towel instead of a dozen, and when will he figure out how to make those things on the waxed paper boxes actually cut something other than your finger when you pick up the box?

The invention I would most like to see is a plastic garbage can that doesn't immediately absorb the smell of whatever you put inside it.

If you use a paper bag for a liner, forget the liner or don't tie the liner closed each time, the cans available now smell like onions if you put onions in there or tuna fish if you put tuna cans in there. The combination of fumes can knock you over if you open the lid without bracing yourself.

How about a dry-type rug cleaner? That way, you don't end up painting yourself into a corner with it and having to walk across a wet rug, which is particularly annoying if you're like me; I don't wear shoes when I clean the rug because I don't want to track dirt on it.

They can make heated socks; why can't they heat a toilet seat on a cold winter morning? Speaking of toilet seats, is there a way that the seat in a co-ed house can be made to go back down automatically when the guys forget?

Is there a way to invent one of those little mail organizers that can take the larger envelopes and magazines without someone first folding them? This one seems easy but I have never, ever seen one.

I know no-slip rugs exist because I bought one and it's great. Now, how about a rug that doesn't grab onto pet hair and hold on for dear life when you vacuum?

I used to have one of those neat little pens which have the holders that stick to the telephone. It's around the house somewhere, but it's out of ink. Will somebody please invent a refill? Those things hang around for months before you remember to take them off the phone and you end up engraving your messages instead of writing them.

The little plate-washing device on the sink is grand, except that when you first turn on the water, it always shoots out too strongly, ricochets off a dirty plate and puts spaghetti sauce on the ceiling. I wish an inventor would control this.

I'd just settle, though, for the invention of a jar that can be opened without the assistance of a rubber band grip around the lid, a large wrench, a defensive lineman or a sledgehammer. Then maybe I could use some of those neat little kitchen gadgets our friends have given us to make myself something nice to eat, like a peanut butter sandwich.

Thomas seeks reelection as Circuit Court judge

Judge James E. Thomas, incumbent Circuit Court judge for Hancock, Harrison and Stone counties, has announced he is seeking reelection.

Thomas has been circuit judge since 1983. He served as assistant district attorney for more than seven years, leaving as senior assistant in 1982 to successfully run for judge. Before that, he was in private practice.

Judge Thomas is a graduate of the University of Southern Mississippi where he received his degree in history and political science.

He went on to earn his juris doctorate law degree from Ole Miss. Thomas was the youngest judge in the state at the time of his election in 1982.

He presently serves as chairman of the State Circuit Judges Conference and is a regular participant of the continuing judicial programs at the Mississippi Judicial College.

"I have been tough but fair on criminals (some have nicknamed me "Ten-Year Thomas") and I have stressed the need to be careful and mindful of the rights of victims," he said.

"I am pleased to have the support among law enforcement and those who work most closely with me, the lawyers, who gave me an approval rating of 98 percent in an independent poll conducted in 1986."

Judge Thomas, a native of Gulfport, and his wife Sue, a former Biloxi school teacher, live in Biloxi with their two daughters.

The primary election to be held on Tuesday, April 4 and the general election to be held on Tuesday, June 20 is an at-large election to fill three circuit judgeships; voters can mark their ballot for one, two or three of the four candidates.

Give yourself the chance of a lifetime.

Veterans Affairs now in President's Cabinet

March 15 was a historic day for our nation's 27 million veterans, (233,000 in Mississippi).

It marked the transition of their agency, the Veterans Administration, to the Department of Veterans Affairs and elevates VA to the President's Cabinet.

In making this change, Congress and President Bush recognized what we in VA have long known: military veterans (who, with their families, constitute a third of our population) deserve representation at our highest level of government. Their contribution to our way of life and their needs influence people and events far beyond the bounds of "veterans affairs."

Veterans are served by the nation's largest hospital system which plays vital national roles in medical education and research.

Veterans buying homes through the VA guaranteed home loan program are a major economic force in the national real estate, home building and mortgage lending industries.

Veterans continue to be a major force in the financing of higher education through their participation in popular GI Bill education assistance programs.

Waveland Players announce cast for '6 Rms Riv Vu'

The upcoming production of '6 Rms Riv Vu' by the Waveland Players will feature four stage debuts.

Director Nan Ehrbright has announced the cast for the early-1970's-era comedy by Bob Randall, creator of the popular sitcom, 'Kate and Allie.' Alan Alda and Carol Burnett had the leads in the movie version of the play. Clem Acker and Glenda Coss will play the starring roles for the Waveland Players.

Their spouses will be played by Kitty Dougherty and Edgar Perez. Rounding out the cast are Kate Reynolds, D. C. Harvill, Carol Ann Young and Gayle Roy.

The four newcomers to the stage are Dougherty, Reynolds, Harvill and Young. Acker and Young live in Diamondhead. The remainder of the cast are Bay St. Louis residents.

Acker, a supervisory oceanographer for the Naval Oceanographic Office at John C. Stennis Space Center, is an active member and former president of the Diamondhead Little Theatre.

His credits for the Diamondhead community theatre group include roles in 'Romantic Comedy,' 'A Bad Year for Tomatoes,' 'Here Lies Jeremy Troy' and 'Wait Until Dark.'

Coss is a program support specialist for the National Data Buoy Center at Stennis Space Center. Her credits include roles in 'Greater Tuna' and 'Bull in a China Shop' for Waveland Players, 'Lie, Cheat and Genuflect' for Bay St. Louis Little Theatre, 'The Octette Bridge Club' for Gulfport Little Theatre, 'The Wizard of Oz' for KNS Theatre and 'Scrooge, the Musical' for Friends of the Saenger.

Perez is a staff writer for 'The Sun Herald' and former managing editor of 'The Sea Coast Echo.' A newcomer to the Waveland stage but not to community theatre, his stage credits include roles in 'How the Other Half Loves,' 'The Butler Did It,' 'Love, Sex and the IRS,' 'The Odd Couple,' and 'Never Get Smart With an Angel,' all for Bay St. Louis Little Theatre.

Roy is a dispatcher/firefighter for the Bay St. Louis Fire Department. She has appeared in 13 productions for Waveland Players, Bay St. Louis Little Theatre, Gulfport Little Theatre, Riviera Productions and Center Stage, including 'How the Other Half Loves,' 'Annie,' 'The Prisoner of Second Avenue' and 'Plaza Suite.' Her next appearance will be in 'Social Security' at Center Stage in late March.

Dougherty is a factory sales representative for Philip Morris, V.S.A. Reynolds is special education coordinator for the Hancock County and Bay-Waveland school district. Harvill is a reporter for 'The Sea Coast Echo' and Young is employed by Wal-Mart.

"I am delighted that 50 percent of the cast are novices," Ehrbright said. "People who participate in community theatre are friendly, outgoing people, and we always welcome newcomers. The 'icing on the cake' is that we also have newcomers working behind the scenes on set construction, properties and the play program for this production."

'6 Rms Riv Vu' will be produced at the Waveland Civic Center at 8 p.m. on May 5 and 6, with a 2 p.m. matinee on May 7. Tickets are $4 at the door, with a discounted price of $3 for those 60 years and older.

PRESCRIPTIONS FOR PROFIT

Last year Hall of Famer Mickey Mantle pitched some good news to the 37 million Americans who suffer from arthritis. Mantle, who suffers with perennial knee problems, had tried a newly released medication called Voltaren and virtually pronounced it a wonder drug.

What he did not say was that he had been paid by Voltaren's manufacturer, the international pharmaceutical giant CIBA-GEIGY, for the promotion. Nor did he mention anything about possible side effects ranging from stomach discomfort to liver damage.

'Frontline' with Judy Woodruff investigates the fiercely competitive marketing and promotions tactics for such products in 'Prescriptions for Profit' at 9 p.m., Tuesday, March 28, on Mississippi ETV.

Because it can take from seven to ten years and cost an average of $125 million to get a new drug tested, approved and onto the market, manufacturers are under tremendous pressure to recoup their investment.

But ethicists worry about a system in which doctors can be paid to promote various drugs and in which many doctors decide what to prescribe based largely on advertising and promotion by the drug companies.

The tournament was developed last year by the Diamondhead Academy PTO, in conjunction with Ed Nelson, stage and screen star and Diamondhead property owner. Mr. Nelson is best known for his starring role in 'Peyton Place,' and for recent roles in 'Dynasty,' 'Hotel,' 'Cagney and Lacey,' 'J. J. Starbuck,' and 'McGiver.' fillets crowned with Burgundy Mushroom Sauce, or Filet of Snapper Kamehameha, a fresh red snapper filet paneed and topped with a shrimp and crabmeat dressing, then napped with a silken lobster sauce.

Both entrees will be accompanied by linguine with basil butter sauce and a medley of fresh seasonal vegetables with herbs. The piece de resistance will be a serving of Chocolate Chocolate Torte with Raspberry Sauce and Chantilly Cream.

Historic preservation bill provides tax exemptions

BY DENA BISNETTE

Legislation has passed which may assist Bay St. Louis and other small cities in development of historical districts.

Senate Bill 2690, introduced by State Senator Bob Montgomery, provides local governments the authority to, at their discretion, provide up to seven years' exemption from any or all municipal ad valorem taxes. That exemption does not include ad valorem taxes for school district taxes.

The exemption will be available for "any privately owned new structures and any new renovations of and improvements to existing structures lying within a designated central business district or historic preservation district on a historic landmark site, as determined by the municipality."

However, the bill states that it will be available "only in the event such structures shall have been constructed, renovated or improved pursuant to the requirements of an approved project of the municipality for the development of the central business district and/or the preservation and revitalization of historic landmark sites or historic preservation districts."

The bill takes effect July 1 and requires that any person, firm or corporation claiming the exemption first make written application to the municipality and an order is passed stating that the construction, renovation or improvement is designed to promote either business and commerce in the designated central business district or historic preservation.

Susan Enzweiler, who serves as certified local government coordinator for the Mississippi Department of Archives and History's Historic Preservation

District, said she hopes the bill will stimulate economic development in smaller communities, in addition to historic preservation.

The certified local government program is a matching grant program geared toward the same results as the bill.

"Bay St. Louis is not a CLG right now," she explained, "but it certainly has the potential to become one. It really is an attractive little community."

Enzweiler said Bay St. Louis can definitely be helped by the bill because it has historical districts that are designated on the National Register of Historic Places, a federal program.

To become a CLG, the city would have to form a local historic preservation commission, give historical districts local designation through the commission, and set up guidelines so that the buildings there will be properly rehabilitated and any new construction will conform to the particular historical character of the district.

Charles Gray, president of the Hancock County Historical Society, said he was "delighted" that legislation which would help preservation efforts had passed.

"We're, of course, in favor of anything that would aid historic preservation," Gray said. "That would be invaluable to anyone, as well as to us because we have lost so much to hurricanes and past fires."

"This will be helpful in restoring these areas in a manner which is in keeping with the past."

He also said he plans to look into the CLG and other programs which might offer Bay St. Louis some assistance with historic preservation guidelines.

Statewide Trash Bash to clean up highways marked for April 29

Mississippi's first annual statewide Trash Bash '89 is scheduled for Saturday, April 29.

Trash Bash '89 is an event in which Adopt-A-Highway members are asked to band together statewide to pick up litter along "adopted" sections of our highways.

The Highway Department is asking Adopt-A-Highway members to report the number of bags of litter collected to establish the results of Trash Bash '89.

The AAH program is sponsored by the Mississippi State Highway Department. It is an anti-litter campaign established to generate public involvement in keeping Mississippi highways litter free and to help reduce the high cost of litter removal.

Private and civic organizations are allowed to "adopt" sections of highway for a minimum of one year. These sections are kept litter free by the volunteer organizations.

In exchange for the volunteer work, the Highway Department agrees to erect a large sign on each end of the section that bears the name of the adopting organization.

For the Southern District, contact Wilda Butler at 684-2111.

Pilgrimage beckons visitors to local points of interest

BY JANET MCQUEEN
Spring Pilgrimage is a tradition of Southern hospitality which has been enjoyed by Mississippi Gulf Coast residents for 42 years.

Sponsored by the Mississippi Gulf Coast Council of Garden Clubs, the event features privately owned homes, historic buildings and other points of interest that are open to the public in each community for a single day.

Members of each respective garden club serve as hostesses for the chosen sites, with refreshments and lunch available to visitors.

The Welcome Center of the John C. Stennis Space Center and the Hancock County Welcome Center will be the opening locations of the pilgrimage coastwide on Monday, March 27.

JOHN STENNIS SPACE CENTER

Visitors to the Stennis Center will be welcomed from 9 a.m. - 5 p.m. The center features exhibits by the resident agencies, demonstrations, movies and a panoramic view from the 90-foot Space Tower.

A glimpse of the area's history and vision of the future offered by science and technology is the focus of the Welcome Center. Every 45 minutes, guided bus tours will take visitors to the Space Shuttle Test Complex and to the site of historic Gainesville on the banks of the East Pearl River.

Cafeteria facilities are available and cameras are allowed.

Mrs. George E. Braud is chairman.

HANCOCK COUNTY WELCOME CENTER

The Hancock County Welcome Center invites pilgrimage visitors from 9 a.m. - 4 p.m. Ladies from the Bay-Waveland and Diamondhead Garden Clubs will be hostesses with Mrs. J. R. Autenreith serving as chairman.

The center is a replica of an antebellum home and has been called "the most beautiful hospitality center in the USA". Interior appointments and paintings, as well as the handsome staircase emphasize the antebellum period. It is located at the junction of I-10 and State Highway 607 and was constructed in 1979.

DIAMONDHEAD

Diamondhead Garden Club will serve as host for the Wednesday, March 29 pilgrimage tour from 10 a.m. - 4 p.m. Mrs. William N. Eckert and Mrs. Theodore A. Godard are chairmen.

an antique gas light.

All downstairs rooms in this 'built for convenience' home lead to the sunroom which overlooks the lovely garden. An antique stained glass window provides interest to the stairway leading to the second floor.

Upon entering the home, you will notice two oil whale lamps that have been converted to electricity. The foyer also boasts

Mr. and Mrs. Berlon Dennis, 334 Puunani Place—The home is a three bedroom classic creole raised cottage located on Paradise Bayou.

This lovely home reflects the Dennises' love for antiques and an elegant, yet casual lifestyle. Flo Blue china from Booth's of London in the Princess pattern graces the dining room table. An extensive Waterford collection is also a prized possession.

The view from the rear rooms of the house is unmatched—a vista of waterways in a natural setting.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Barnes, 552 Hanauma Place. This executive home overlooks the 14th Green of the Pine Golf Course.

Nine-foot ceilings, skylights, Mexican tile and an atrium are just a few of the features that make this home very special. The master bedroom has a mirrored wall, double walk-in closet and the master bath features a sunken jacuzzi, sauna and steam shower.

The living room boasts a wet bar and custom built-ins are featured throughout. Pickled pine paneling accents the den and a lovely view of the golf course can be seen from several of the rooms.

St. Paul Catholic Church, 151 East Scenic Drive, 10 a.m. to noon.

This modern, beautifully designed church replaces the historic one destroyed by Hurricane Camille in 1969.

It serves as a beacon for many seamen. A shrine to Our Lady of Guadalupe is on the east side of the church.

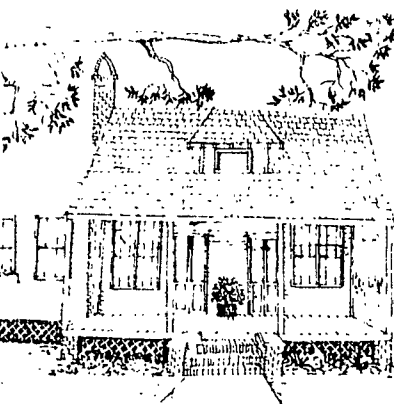

Trinity Episcopal Church, West Beach and Church Street, 11 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

This church duplicates the 1849 original, which was destroyed by Hurricane Camille.

Of special interest is new work done by a group of New Orleans ladies in memory of those who lost their lives in Hurricane Camille.

In Live Oak Cemetery, north of the church, is the burial site of Frances Parke Lewis Butler, great-granddaughter of Martha Washington and grandniece of George Washington.

Pass Christian Yacht Club, Luncheon 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. for $6. Reservations not required.

Home of Mrs. Claiborne E. Rick, 248 East Second Street. In the heart of Pass Christian, this charming cottage was built in 1833. Its present owner, Mrs. Claiborne E. Rick, did extensive renovation in 1985 and 1986. The owner resides in this beautiful home year-round.

"The Cottages," Home of Elizabeth Howell/Vester Wentzell, 505 East Second Street. The main house was built in 1885 with additions from 1900-1910.

This is an authentic renovation and an antique lover's paradise! The cottages wrap around a private courtyard and connect with porches and deck.

Life Oak House. Bed and Breakfast Inn, 126 West Scenic Drive. In 1880, this old house was known as the Crescent Hotel.

During the Civil War, it was the site of the Bed Sheet Surrender. Presently, it is the home and business of Jen and William H. Barrett Jr. and family. Tea will be served from 2 to 4:30 p.m.

The Taylor Cottage, 511 East Second Street. The Taylor's home is a fine example of the evolution of early rural cottages.

Originally a late 19th century double cottage with a French door and window on each side and an open loggia at the rear, a three-bay porch was added to the front and the loggia was extended and enclosed.

The later addition of the kitchen wing and den open on to the loggia. A brick fireplace graces the living room, which is separated from the dining room by a low partition reminiscent of the double parlors of the early 20th century.

Pipe floors, floral prints, bright colors and the rippled antique glass give this cottage the elegant, yet quaint ambiance of the Taylor's town and country lifestyle.

The Diamondhead Community Center and Atrium is always a pleasant stop prior to visiting the homes and gardens featured each year.

This year horticulture entries from the Diamondhead

Garden Club's annual flower show will also be on display while floral design entries will be featured in the open homes.

Maps will be available and refreshments will be served.

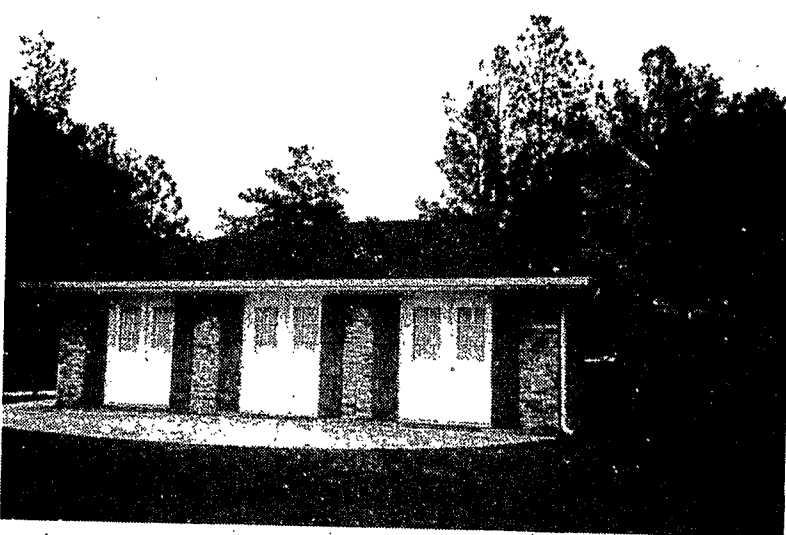

The Diamondhead Baptist Church, located northwest of the Community Center. In January 1975 the first preaching point was held in Diamondhead Fairway Villa.

Today the church has a full-time pastor serving a membership of 171, a chapel, multipurpose building and an educational building.

The church offers a full slate of religious activities and is sponsored by First Baptist Church in Bay St. Louis.

Mr. and Mrs. David Enderle, 6870 Awini Street. Originally from Louisiana, the Enderles decided upon a small, easy to maintain Louisiana-style cottage that is private to the street, but with open airy interiors full of light.

The U-shaped house warps around a cool inviting courtyard.

Large French doors in the combination living/dining room, kitchen and master bedroom open onto the courtyard allowing easy circulation for entertaining.

The interior, done by a professional designer from Baton Rouge, carries a wedgewood-blue theme complemented by the many mementos collected by the Enderles during their travels throughout Great Britain and the European Continent.

Ambrose to address Hancock Historical Society

Recently named UNO Boyd Professor

STEPHEN AMBROSE

The Hancock County Historical Society will host Stephen Ambrose's intimate historical panorama of "Dwight Eisenhower—Good and Great Man" on Wednesday, March 29 at 7 p.m. at the meeting room in the Mississippi Power building at the corner of Dunbar and Hwy. 90.

Ambrose, a Bay St. Louis resident and professional historian, is alumni professor of history at University of New Orleans.

He is the author of 17 books on political and military history, translated into as many as six languages, including the two volumes on Eisenhower.

Ambrose was recently named a Boyd Professor, the highest honor that can be accorded a faculty member in the Louisiana State University system.

Only 41 faculty members in the LSU system have been awarded a Boyd professorship. Ambrose is the fourth UNO professor given the honor.

The Boyd professorship was established in 1952 in honor of two of LSU's early presidents, David French Boyd and Thomas D. Boyd, and is reserved for faculty members "who have attained national or international distinction for outstanding teaching, research or other creative achievements."

In designating Ambrose a Boyd Professor, the LSU Board of Supervisors noted that he "has attained national and international distinction for his scholarly achievements in military and political history" and has been particularly "recognized for his recent biographies on Eisenhower and Nixon; for his interpretive study on American foreign policy since 1938, 'Rise to Globalism,' which is used as a text at many institutions; and for his earlier works on the Civil War."

Director of the Eisenhower Center at UNO, Ambrose has been a member of the university's history faculty from 1960 and 1964 and from 1971 to the present. In the interim period, he served on the faculties of Johns Hopkins University, the Naval War College, and Kansas State University. He took a leave of absence from UNO in 1981-82 to serve as the Mary Ball Washington Professor of history at University College, Dublin.

A native of Whitewater, Wisc., Ambrose received his undergraduate and doctoral degrees in history from the University of Wisconsin, and his master's from LSU.

Ambrose is the author of 18 books on U.S. foreign relations, military history, and political and military leaders.

Among these books are five on Dwight D. Eisenhower, most notably the highly acclaimed two-volume Eisenhower biography.

Ambrose is also the author of the dual biography of Chief Crazy Horse and General Custer.

In 1987, the year he was named a Notable Wisconsin Author by the Wisconsin Library Association.

Ambrose had published the first of a two-volume biography on Richard M. Nixon, entitled "Nixon: The Education of a Politician." He is currently conducting research for a narrative of D-Day memoirs, gathered from World War II veterans.

For the book, "Eisenhower: The President," Ambrose received the 1984 George Washington Honor Medal.

highest award of the Freedoms Foundation at Valley Forge. He received the Creative Programming Award from the National University Continuing Education Association, honoring him for his organization of the program, "Peace in Europe: 40th Anniversary," held at UNO in 1985.

He also was named 1985 Louisiana Humanist of the Year by the Louisiana Endowment for the Humanities.

The public is invited to attend.

South Central Bell offers cable location number

South Central Bell is asking for preliminary notice from farmers in this area who are preparing their land for this season's crops.

If farmers are breaking ground or burning off fields along highway right-of-way where there is a probability of buried telephone cable, they should notify Mississippi-One-Call toll free at 1-800-227-6477 for free cable location.

Pat Santucci, South Central Bell district manager, said telephone junction boxes, or pedestals on private property and road right-of-ways are usually damaged more often than other outside equipment.

"Excessive heat generated by grass or brush fires melt the telephone wires and cause area phones to go out-of-order," Santucci said. "Not only is this expensive and time consuming to repair, but it creates quite an inconvenience to the telephone customers in the affected area."

"This is the same service that is offered in the South Central Bell telephone directory Customer Guide for those who are planning digging, grading or boring," Santucci concluded.

English instructor's love affair with South depicted in essay

EDITOR'S NOTE: Bruce L. Hoem, an English instructor at Pearl River Community College, has received a $150 honorarium from the Mississippi Press Association and the Mississippi Council for the Humanities for an essay which was accepted for statewide publication.

The essay, "The Pond," will be distributed to all major newspapers in the state as part of a program to promote articles concerned with historical subjects, contemporary concerns and other subjects of interest to Mississippians.

THE POND

By Bruce L. Hoem

The following article is financially assisted by the National Endowment for the Humanities through a grant from the Mississippi Humanities Council to the Mississippi Press Association. The opinions expressed are those of the author and do not necessarily represent the views of these organizations.

My stepdaughter and I recently built a pond behind our old barn. As ponds go it is not much. It is neither deep nor wide, and it is not naturally fed by a cold-flowing spring. For water it must rely entirely on rainy days or on me tapping into the house water system and dragging lengths of hose to its edge.

The pond was built with an old pick that was loaned to me by a good friend, and two shovels, one of which was new and shiny and sharp and another that was well-used, dull, and with only half a handle.

Though it seemed like it was taking us forever to build the pond, as I write this and look back on it, the time spent was not that long at all.

Yet building that pond was hard and dirty work for the two of us, and I suppose it is that that made the hot humid days so endless. We would chop and cut and shovel at the near unyielding red clay until we were exhausted, and then we would stop and rest. After we had our second wind and had downed our fill of ice water, we would go at it again.

When we rested, we sat in two old folding metal chairs that I had already decided would be ideal for sitting in when the pond was complete and there was a duck or two on it that we could enjoy watching in the evenings.

And eventually the pond was completed.

One steamy afternoon we were standing in a spoon-shaped impression that had a steady mound of dirt piled all about its perimeter when we both suddenly realized that the chopping, cutting, and digging were finished. This small scar that we had scratched into the surface of the earth was finally ready for water.

With fingers crossed we began the long and slow process of filling it, hoping that the water would not find its way through one of our foot-packed earthen dikes or simply soak away through the pond floor. And though it leaks a little here and there and needs some reinforcement on a low spot now and then, my stepdaughter and I now sit in those two old chairs in the evenings.

We sit and laugh and talk to the four ducks that we bought and worry over as if they are made of gold. To us, perhaps they are. There is also a rusty water tank that sits beside the pond, and hanging on the tank is a sign that reads, "Wishing Well." It is something we both agreed was needed for the finishing touch.

Sometimes when we are sitting there, I glance at my stepdaughter and remember that this young teenage girl was once a three-year-old stranger whom I was tucking into bed on those winter nights when her mother was waitressing the late shift at a local cafe. I see all the post holes that she has helped me dig, all the fences that we have built.

I realize at these times that I will not really be that long before she will have other things to do in the evenings than sit with me and watch those silly ducks. I do not know if any of the pennies thrown into the tank will help our wishes to come true, but one evening when I wanted to wish that time would slow down and she would be home to sit with me for many years to come, I hesitated with a penny on the tips of my fingers.

If such a wish came true, it would be unfair to her and to all those who are some day to share her secrets and dreams. The world is always waiting anxiously for the rushing, exuberant spirit of youth, and I haven't the right to stand it its way.

With a hand that appeared steadier than the heart that was making it so, I wished for her success and happiness and threw the penny into the tank.

"What's you wish for?" she asked.

"Heck," I said smiling and remembering a time when I had sat with my own father, "if I tell you, it won't come true."

I think it was a pretty good wish and one that I will hedge with a few more pennies from time to time. After all, a rich man can always afford to spend his small change.

Citrus fruit may offer protection against cancer

The next time your breakfast includes a tangy glass of orange juice or half a grapefruit, don't make a face if it has a slightly bitter taste. Those compounds which give citrus fruit some of its bitterness may also offer increased protection against cancer.

A new research project, funded by the American Institute for Cancer Research, is studying "limonoids," the compounds responsible for some of the bitter taste in citrus fruits.

This research, conducted by Luke K. T. Lam, PhD, a researcher at the Gray Freshwater Biological Institute of the University of Minnesota, is examining how these compounds may stimulate the body's natural defense against cancer.

Scientists know that each day we are exposed to a variety of cancer-causing substances in our environment. These potential carcinogens come from many common sources, including radiation, smoking, industrial chemicals, pollution and even sunlight. But most of us don't get cancer because our bodies are able to remove or fight these poisons before they damage cells and lead to cancer. Research, such as Dr. Lam's, is looking at the ways in which the foods we eat can stimulate this "detoxification" process and thus offer us greater cancer protection.

Dr. Lam and his co-workers have examined a number of different foods. One study of Dr. Lam's found that certain compounds in green coffee beans could prevent breast cancer in laboratory animals.

Although humans don't eat green coffee beans, Dr. Lam discovered that compounds with similar structural features were also found in foods we do eat: oranges, lemons, limes and grapefruits.

Supporting a dieter

If a family member is dieting and you want to help, offer support and encouragement.

Eating habits are hard to change. So comment on these changes, rather than solely on lost pound. "I noticed that you chose to eat your snack away from the television, that's been a problem area for you. Seems like you are adjusting to a new routine well."

Encourage physical activities. Be a good model of both eating and exercise. Offer to walk, job or play active games with the dieter.

Make sure that proper foods are served at meals if you are the family food preparer. Prepare healthy snack foods, and keep them handy. Enlist the help of the whole family in making sure problem foods are kept out of the home or at least stored out of sight.

Don't undermine your family member's efforts. Avoid comments or scolding when you see a violation. Instead, ask the dieter what he or she would like you to do if you see them "cheat." If the person says do nothing, then do nothing.

In many families, food is a sign of affection. Find other ways to express your love. "Oh, but I baked your favorite cake," isn't loving when directed toward a dieter.

Sometimes relatives aren't able to give support because of his or her own feelings about weight control. If this is true for you, simply ignore the efforts of your family member until you can give encouragement. By doing nothing, you may not be supporting, but neither are you interfering with progress.

There are many weight control groups and support groups in our area. One that's free and in the process of recruiting new clients is the Weight Off Wisely group. The group meets Monday, 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Coast Electric Crew Room. In addition to diet and weigh-in, the class conducts exercise and acts as a support group to its members. For information call 467-5456.

INFERTILITY ADVANCES

Having a baby. It's easy for most people, but for an estimated two to three million American couples, it's become the most difficult part of their lives. They are infertile.

'Expecting Miracles' at 10 p.m., Monday, March 27, on Mississippi ETV, follows four couples diagnosed as infertile through their medical and private lives over a period of three years as they each struggle to conceive a child of their own.

Actress Kate Mulgrew is the narrator for this look at the miraculous achievements of in vitro fertilization and other high-tech medical procedures.

CLUBS, AUXILIARIES

Riverview Club

The regular monthly meeting of the Riverview Club of Cooperative Extension Service was held at the home of Joan Little on Good Street. Fourteen members were present. One visitor, Sue Hale, attended.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Margie Welsh. Ruby Rothgerber gave the devotional. The educational topic was on "Confusions of Cholesterol," given by Ethel Breaux.

The president reminded the group of several important dates: March 22, Dress Revue;

April 11, District Council at Ellsville; April 21-22, Jitney Jungle Health Fair; and May 10, Health Fair and Cultural Arts Exhibit at Library. Several brought newborn baby clothing for the needy.

The program was given by Cecelia Burke, in-service coordinator of Hancock Medical Center. A video tape was shown as a refresher course for CPR. The group learned much from the presentation.

Next meeting will be at the home of Margie Welsh on April 20.

The Sea Coast Echo

Howdy folks!

I'm 98 years old this year and have spent every day of that time here in my beloved Hancock County. In fact, I just might be the oldest resident around.

During my lifetime, I have been into almost every home, mobile home, apartment and business in the area. When I come around, I always try to put on my best face, but with the way this crazy world is going nowadays, it is sometimes difficult. The toughest part of my job is that of acting as the harbinger of bad news. But for the most part, thank goodness we don't have too much of that too often. Our little world of Hancock County, Mississippi is a pretty darned good place in which to live.

You can help me make it an even better place for you, me and your children if you keep up with what is going on around you. If you stay abreast of the happenings in and around our county, cities, and schools, you can become a more knowledgeable, active citizen for your community by speaking out, as I often do on issues which directly affect us all. There are generally two sides to every story, but unless one has all of the facts there is generally no way to fight the problem, much less find a solution.

This year and for the 97 preceding, it has been my job to acquaint you with the politicians and other community leaders, what they are doing for and to you, and what you can do for them to help bring about much needed improvement and stability to the area.

I also have the major responsibility of bringing the messages of our merchants to each and every one of you. Everyone loves to shop. So, twice each week I go around to all of the stores, shops, restaurants, homes and flea markets to seek out the best buys for you.

Sometimes my memory isn't too good, but the other day I was searching it for something I read more than 65 years ago. It goes in part:

"I trade at home and never roam
Seeking "bargains" elsewhere.
I love the town in which I live,
For all my interests are there.

And then again, I buy from friends,
We all need one another.

When buying here, with conscience clear,
I put my money down,
I know it stays right here and works
For the welfare of my town.

So that is why I trade at home
I'm a booster through and through,
For a town that's good to live in,
Is good to buy in, too."

Instead of growing feeble with age, I am getting stronger every day. I can attribute this to the inspiration I receive from you, the people of Hancock County and surrounding areas.

I have always said that I want to live to be 153 years of age just to see what happens to this crazy world of ours. With the help of you and yours, I am going to reach that goal and beyond.

By way of introduction, I am THE SEA COAST ECHO, your local news newspaper. I come to you every Thursday and Sunday through home delivery and mail, or through your local stores and newspaper racks.

If you haven't been reading THE ECHO on a regular basis you "HAVE TO BE HUNGRY FOR LOCAL NEWS".

So, beginning April 1, 1989 I am sending your way my "ANNUAL APRIL BANDWAGON OF SAVINGS". This is your chance to subscribe to your local newspaper at prices you may never see again.

Watch for our ads beginning March 29th.

Don't wait! Join me in helping to bring Hancock County to the forefront. Find out what is going on and take a more active part in government and community affairs. You'll find it all in my pages, plus bargains galore.

BY D.C. HARRY

Bay St. Louis' first election in May will be the first time in recorded history according to a spokesman for the Hancock County Democratic Executive Committee. For an election to be held, candidates must be certified by a nominating committee of the party holding the election.

Until Saturday Bay St. Louis did not have a municipal government, according to Charles L. Chalk, chairman of the County Democratic Executive Committee.

"For the first time in over a hundred years the election in Bay St. Louis will be conducted by the people."
